WORLD UNITES WITH AMERICA IN PAYING HIGH TRIBUTE AT THE GRAVE OF UNKNOWN HERO

VOICE OF THE WORLD CALLED TO CRUSADE AGAINST WARFARE

Admired Silent Shady Groves Of Arlington Cemetery, On Hills Of Old Virginia, Steeped In History Of The Birth And Struggles Of This Nation, America's Unknown Hero Finds His Final Resting Place.

President And Ex-Presidents, Generals And Diplomats, Take Part In Ceremony

By A. L. BRADFORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, D. C., November 11.—A solemn funeral cortege bore to its last resting place today the body of America's unknown soldier. Down Capitol Hill, from its shrine of honor where it had lain in state, the flower-strewn casket was escorted by the great men of the nation to the hallowed spot in Arlington Cemetery.

The President of the United States, members of the Supreme Court, Governors of States, both Houses of Congress, and soldier heroes of all ranks walked silently behind the simple artillery caisson on which the body lay.

Just as the sun dissipated the morning mist which hung low over the capitol grounds, watchers at the foot of the hill heard the blare of trumpets and saw the procession wend its way slowly down the hill to Pennsylvania Avenue.

World Pays Tribute

In this spirit America and in a sense the World kneel today to pay homage to some unknown, unnamed human body salvaged from the soil of outraged France, a mute victim of the sacrifices which save civilization.

While the entire nation bowed its head in silent tribute for two minutes today, in response to a presidential proclamation, President Harding, ex-President Woodrow Wilson and William Howard Taft, scores of high officials and representatives of the great powers of the earth, honored America's unknown dead in services at the Arlington National Cemetery.

On the casket in the presence of the distinguished world assemblage, were placed the highest military decorations of the allied countries and the Congressional Medal of Honor of the United States.

Silent Sentinels Guard Body
America's Unknown Soldier Hero lay in state in the rotunda of the National Capitol. The body rested on the same catafalque on which were placed the bodies of the martyred Presidents, Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley.

Here the body had rested for more than twenty-four hours, under a guard of honor. Through the day and night, there have stood four silent sentinels, one near each corner of the bier.

This bodyguard has been specially picked from the engineers, cavalry, artillery and infantry of the Army and from the Navy, so that the four sentinels on duty at any one time, have represented different arms and branches of the country's armed forces.

Funeral Escort Forms

On the broad expanse outside at the east front of the Capitol, the military escort for the Unknown Hero in the grand procession down historic Pennsylvania Avenue, was formed. It was headed by Brigadier General Harry H. Bandholtz, commanding general of the District of Washington, and his staff, with them a band a composite regiment of regular army infantry, sailors and marines, national guard troops, field artillery, and a squadron of cavalry.

Out of the Capitol, the Hero's body was carried and placed on an artillery caisson. The military formation saluted the emblem and the pall bearers formed in column of files on either side of the caisson.

WILL U. S. SPEND BILLIONS FOR DISARMAMENT?

William Jennings Bryan Analyzes Situation Now Facing Representatives of All Nations In Conference At Capital

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN
Copyright 1921, by United Press
Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—The conference which is about to assemble may prove to be the most important gathering in centuries, or it may bring the greatest disappointment experienced in generations.

It all depends upon the real purpose of the actors—a purpose that can only be revealed by acts.

Depends on Actors

If the delegates believe universal and perpetual peace possible, they will try to secure it; if not they will not attempt anything of real and permanent importance.

It is a conference from which any one of the nations may emerge the hero.

The United States may surprise the world by offering so much that the other nations will be compelled to accept the offer and end war.

Japan may announce a willingness to go so far as to insure the success of the conference.

Great Britain may step to the front and settle discussion by a proposition which will leave the other nations no alternative but to accept.

France may find in disarmament her greatest security, and point the way to world peace.

Who will win the capital prize, which in this case will be the plaudits of the world and the gratitude of posterity?

The United States has the best position. She extended the invitation and has the first move. More than that, her traditional policy has been to rely upon her pacifist intentions rather than upon fleets and armies. In the present instance, she has a mighty asset in the debts due her.

Bryan's Supposition

Suppose the United States were to step forward and say: We are willing to pay ten billions for the progressive disarmament of the world, begun at once and continued until the navies are no larger than necessary to police the seas and the armies no larger than necessary to preserve peace on land; could the nations refuse the offer?

Ten billions of debt cancelled on such conditions would enable the allies and their enemies to get together

(United Press Correspondent)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—The great arms parley awaits the stroke of Secretary of State Hughes' gavel in Continental Memorial Hall at 10:30 tomorrow morning.

The opening program was complete today and everything in the big hall was ready for the ushering in of the greatest international gathering in history.

Today the delegates are paying the highest honors to America's unknown soldier. All are seated on the balcony of the great white marble amphitheatre at Arlington.

Memorial Hall Ready

On the big green carpet in the Arms Conference Hall rests the great horseshoe shaped table around which the representatives of the world powers will discuss arm limitation. On three sides the delegates will be surrounded by about 360 representatives of the press.

The conference will be opened by a prayer, the Rev. W. S. Abernathy, pastor of President Harding's church here, delivering the invocation.

President Harding will then address the conference. No reply will be made at that time, the foreign delegates have decided. Formal organization of the conference will then follow, with the probable election of Secretary of State Hughes as chairman. The presiding officer, chosen will then address the parley, after which adjournment will be taken until next Tuesday when active work of the conference will start.

THOUSANDS CHEER EX-PRES. WILSON IN PROCESSION

America's War President Rides Down Pennsylvania Ave. Behind Vets Of Foreign Wars.

(By United Press)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—A thunderous ovation from the tens of thousands of spectators greeted Woodrow Wilson, America's war president as he rode down Pennsylvania avenue today behind the body of America's unknown dead.

The reverent silence that marked the passage of the solemn funeral cortege gave way to cheering as the Wilson carriage drove by. E-President and Mrs. Wilson were ten minutes late in reaching the grounds, and lost their original place in the procession. When officials announced their intention of making special place for the ex-president's carriage he said "Anywhere will do" Wilson dropped in at the very end of the procession, behind the section of War Veterans, all with mourning bands on their uniform sleeves.

In their communique to the British cabinet which declared the joint conference with the British representatives, scheduled for today, could serve no useful purpose unless certain proposals in the premier's compromise agreement were withdrawn, the Ulsterites stated they would reply to Premier Lloyd George's note immediately, "indicating practicable means for securing peace without infringing upon Ulster's rights."

It was pointed out that certain fundamental principles in the premier's suggestions for settlement were "impossible of attainment, under existing circumstances."

President Harding Promises In Solemn Vow That Heroic Sacrifice Shall Not Be In Vain

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Amphitheatre, Arlington Cemetery, November 11.—The commanding voice of the world was summoned to a crusade against armed warfare by President Harding, as he stood at the bier of America's unknown dead today.

"His sacrifice and that of the millions dead shall not be in vain," the President promised in a solemn vow that rang out over the silent mourners in the vast amphitheatre.

"There must be—there shall be—the commanding voice of a conscious civilization against armed warfare."

President Harding addressed his measured words directly at the disarmament delegates who sat grouped in front of him. His declaration uttered on the eve of the great conference that meets tomorrow, carried special significance.

Then with tender tribute, he swung into the climax of his oration.

"As we return this poor clay into its mother soil, garlanded by love and covered with the decorations that only nations can bestow, I can sense the prayers of our people, of all peoples, that this armistice day shall mark the beginning of a new and lasting era of peace on earth, good will among men."

Bending reverently over the casket the President with the vast audience joining softly, offered up the Lord's prayer as he closed his address.

"I speak not as a pacifist fearing war, but as one who loves justice and hates war," Harding declared in voicing "his resolution" that civilization must make a supreme effort to end war for all time.

"Let us give of our influence and strength, yea, of our aspirations and convictions, to put mankind on a little higher plane, exulting and exalting, with war's distressing and depressing tragedies barred from the stage of righteous civilization," he pleaded.

Battled For Maintained Nationality

We do not know his station in life because from every station came the patriotic response of the five millions. I recall the days of crawling armies, and the departing of caravels which braved the murderous seas to reach the battle lines for maintenance of nationality and preserved civilization. The service flag marked mansion and cottage alike, and riches were common to all homes in the consciousness of service to country.

We don't know the eminence of his birth, but we do know the glory of his death. He died for his country and greater devotion hath no man than this. He died unquestioning, uncomplaining, with faith in his heart and hope on his lips, that his country should triumph and its civilization survive. As a typical soldier of this representative democracy he fought and died, believing in the indisputable justice of his country's cause. Conscious of the world's upheaval, appraising the magnitude of a war the like of which had never horrified humanity before perhaps he believed his to be a service destined to change the tide of human affairs.

Righteousness An Inspiration

In the death gloom of gas, the bursting of shells and rain of bullets, men face more intimately the great god over all, their souls are aflame, and consciousness expands and hearts are searched. With the din of battle, the glow of conflict, and the supreme trial of courage, come involuntarily the hurried appraisal of life and the contemplation of death's great mystery. On the threshold of eternity, many a soldier, I can well believe wondered how his ebbing blood would color the stream of human life, flowing on after his sacrifice. His patriotism was none less if he craved more than triumph of country; rather it was greater if he hoped for a victory for all human kind. In death, I believe

WORLD UNITES IN TRIBUTE TO HERO

Minute Guns Boom All Day Long-Funeral Cortege Climbs Hill To Last Haven

France, mounted on his favorite charger "Jeff," took his place at the head of the procession, as Grand Marshal. With General Pershing was a staff of distinguished American Generals and Admirals.

A funeral march began to play, alternating with muffled drums, and the procession started its slow progress down Capitol Hill toward Pennsylvania avenue. Pershing led and then came the escort of troops, followed on foot by the Clergy, then the body drawn on the caisson, and immediately after walked the President, Vice President, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Associate Justices, members of the Cabinet, President of the Senate and members of the Senate, Speaker of the House and members, Medal of Honor men, American Legion, Grand Army of the Republic and others, each with a head bowed in reverence.

Slowly the funeral cortege moved down Pennsylvania avenue. Through out the day, a gunshot was fired every minute from Washington barracks, and then as the procession neared Arlington National Cemetery from Fort Myer, Va.

Procession Halts At White House
At the White House, the procession halted for five minutes to allow the President, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and Senate and the House to take automobiles and ride around in a different direction and the hills to the Arlington Cemetery.

Among the silent steady ranks of the Arlington Cemetery, on the hills of Arlington, stood in the history books, the first of the birth and struggle of this new, free and brave nation, America's Unknown Soldier.

Here found his final resting place. Here, this Grave of Honor will be surrounded by the great monuments and little headstones of America's fighting men. And there will be ever closer comrades, thousands of other "unknown dead" their numbers would be in lovely beds of flowers, victims of this country's conflicts of other days in righteous cause.

Funeral Service Begins Before Noon

The burial services in the new and magnificent white marble Arlington Memorial Amphitheater began shortly before noon, with the arrival of the President and Mrs. Harding and the other high officials of the Government. Premiers of Europe and heads of foreign armies and navies, in addition to our own dignitaries, filled this place of marble.

The President made his address and later bestowed on the Unknown Hero the Congressional Medal of Honor, and the highest decoration of Allied Governments.

National Salute Ends Ceremony
The caisson bearing the Unknown Soldier was removed to the front of the amphitheater where a salute had been prepared, such as used by the Greeks of old. The caisson conducted service and prayers, surrounded by the President and a great number of people. Three shots of our first burst forth, and then the caisson moved over the Virginia hills. The National Salute of twenty-one guns fired only for the President of the United States as a nation, who completed the higher honors that this Nation could give to its Unknown Hero.

Around the top of the Amphitheater are down in the state, many famous battle with America's first for freedom and this one great in our ideals and principles of right. Bunker Hill, Yorktown, Antietam, Manila, Santiago.

Stands in honor on the ramparts in front of Arlington National Cemetery are other names of great importance in the history of the Nation. George Washington, Andrew Jackson, Ulysses S. Grant.

OSCAR W. LAWRENCE FUNERAL

The funeral of the late Oscar W. Lawrence, of Clearfield, Pa., was held at the Clearfield Baptist church on Saturday morning, Nov. 6, at 10 o'clock.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

"By Skisney"

How quickly do Clearfield people forget? Only three short years ago when the word was flashed over the wires that the armistice had been signed at 11 o'clock in the morning of November 11th, thus bringing to a close the most terrible war in World History, our people with their full quota of heroic sons in the front line nearly went wild in frantic joy at the good news. Business was forgotten and clerks and proprietors rushed out of stores and shops to join the delicious groups of frenzied citizens rushing about and congratulating each other on the cessation of hostilities.

Look at the difference today. No program; nothing doing and our merchants and shop-keepers were finally induced to grudgingly close their places of business for a measly hour and one half. Verily the pursuit of the "almighty dollar" leaves but little room in the average American heart for patriotism or sentiment. More's the pity.

It is said that men and women who gossip are not in their right minds, and we believe it. These scandal-mongers are called "assassins of character" by an official of one of the large cities who has made a study of them, writing in "The Defective," a municipal magazine, who says that the neighborhood gossip and the anonymous letter writer have one of the nastiest, lowest and most vicious forms of insanity known to medical circles. Their distorted imaginations visualize scenes which they would have come true.

Gossip and anonymous letters, says the New York Medical Journal, are a constant pest at police headquarters, but reports registered with police officers in an attempt to injure character by the means of false character by these means of false telephone reports are a failure; in fact, the police take more pleasure in raking the informer than the one informed about.

holes in the teeth. On the contrary a diet with no candy will make teeth decay.

Teeth decay when the system, not properly fed, lacks a well balanced diet to build good blood, flesh, muscle, nerves and bones. Candy made of pure sugar is an important part of diet, especially for children. Nothing can take its place.

A New Jersey man was arrested the other day on a murder charge after the dead body of his close friend was found in a lonely spot out side the town where he lived. When charged with the crime of murder the prisoner admitted he did the killing but said it was done at the urgent request of the dead man, who gave him five dollars for "the job." He told the police that the dead man wanted to commit suicide but lacked the nerve to do the deed and hired him as his best friend to "bump him off." He accepted the job and fired four shots from an automatic pistol into his friend's body. After the fourth shot the victim asked his friend to hold up a minute that he had "forgotten something." He then pulled out his wallet, extracted a five dollar bill therefrom and handing it to the slayer said "here's pay for your good work. Now finish me." Wasn't he the obliging cuss.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I have taken a great deal of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and consider it a very essential family medicine. I find it very beneficial as a tonic and blood purifier, and sometime ago I suffered with liver trouble, my system seemed entirely out of order, so I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it drove all the impurities out of my system and built me up in a perfect condition. I also find the 'Discovery' excellent to take in cases of deep-seated coughs or colds."—Albert Jennawine, 404 Hamlock St.

Not "Who'll buy my flowers?" but "Won't you have a cup of tea?" is the motif of the lady in the Dresden-like Mary Wallace gown. This gown is of pink taffeta gathered on elastic about the feet. WHAT OF THIS DAY?

Now that Armistice Day, which we observe today, is a national holiday, many are perplexed to know what a fitting observance would be.

Coming as it does as the reminder of that joyful day when the thundering cannon ceased to spout forth death and suffering, the burial day of an unknown soldier in homage to the many who lost their identity in the seething cauldron of battle, and on the eve of the disarmament meeting, in which the bigger powers have met on common ground, it can best be described as a day of joy, sorrow and hope. Joy in that the greatest war on earth terminated in a mighty victory for right, sorrow that so many of the best men we had were called up to sacrifice their lives, and hope that out of the arms conference will come at least an agreement that will prevent the building up of war machines for the purpose of waging war.

With this understanding of the day, joy and sorrow and hope intermingled, it is difficult to know whether to shout, weep or pray. It is this uncertainty which is responsible for the seeming lack of interest in our newest holiday. Probably ere another year rolls around we will have a more concrete conception of a proper observance of Armistice Day.

OUR TROUBLES MAKING YOUR TROUBLES

We find it necessary again to remind our readers that, owing to a break-down of our press, we are going to be late almost every day in getting your paper to you, and when you do get it, it may be torn and smudged. This difficulty is beyond our control for the present and we must ask that our readers be kindly considerate for at least one month.

Incidentally we might mention that a contract has been let for a new press, which will be the peer of any newspaper press outside of those used on city newspapers. It will turn out ten pages at a speed which will enable us to print our entire edition in forty minutes.

Then when this press is installed, kick loud and hard if we are late.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE

The four thousand majority given District Attorney John C. Arnold, who was re-elected for a four year term, is a fine tribute from the people of this county, of all parties, who have admired the stand taken by this official in matters affecting the welfare of the public and the upholding of the law. Rather than weakening the chances of a candidate who has never hesitated to throw down the gauntlet to law violators, his aggressive course in seeing that laws are obeyed, drew the law-abiding citizen to him. In DuBois, where it was claimed his stand on carnival paddle wheels would rob him of support, he had a majority of 970.

His majority is all the more wonderful when the calibre of his opponent is considered. In Wallace W. Smith he had an opponent who stands four square with his fellows; a young lawyer of ability, in whom could be found no fault, and the best candidate the Democratic party could put forth.

Arnold's vote was a tribute to his work and his majority a mandate from the people to keep Clearfield county free of carnivals, and dangerous for bootleggers and distillers.

IN IT TO WIN

Step up, ladies and gentlemen, the election may be over, but there is another one coming mighty soon. Already there is one avowed candidate in the field for next May and he has asked The Progress to tell the world that he is a candidate, and will remain a candidate until he takes his seat in Congress.

This candidate is Deputy Attorney General William I. Swoope, who was a candidate two years ago. At that time Mr. Swoope proved that he was a vote getter by chasing his opponent so closely that it required the official vote to decide between them, and the official count gave Mr. Jones the nomination by only nine votes.

Mr. Swoope will ask the Republicans of this district to name him their nominee for Congress next May and urges the Republicans of this county to remember that Clearfield county has a right to a Congressman next term.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE CONFERENCE

The correspondents from Nippon hand with international gatherings of this kind, and where often some of the most important "business" is done. This task will be a simpler one for the American statesmen and diplomats, who have the same dress clothes as the doctor of Omaha or the business man of San Francisco. State Department officials for weeks have been frantically trying to corral enough automobiles and typewriters and other paraphernalia for the delegates and newspaper correspondents.

Every army has its camp followers. Notable among these at the Washington battlefield is the band of propagandists. Most of these camp followers really preceded their armies. They are here busily singing praises of their wares, which are the aims

Secretary of State Hughes is expected to guide the Conference to a successful accomplishment of its purpose—the securing of an effective agreement among the Powers for limitation of armament. Hughes, the prime sponsor for the Conference, is

RAGGED CHILDREN PLAY BEFORE BLANK SILENT WINDOW FRONTS IN RUSSIA

Scenes Of Desolation
Scattered Broadcast
Throughout Soviet Russia Of Today.

By EDWIN W. HULLINGER

United Press Correspondent

Moscow, Nov. 9.—(By Mail).—

Over the golden towers of the Kremlin, historic, fortified stronghold of the ancient czars and for centuries religious capital of Russia, floats the Red flag of the Revolution.

At midnight and noon the Great Clock, which used to toll the hymn of the empire, now sends out over the Red place, a refrain of the Internationale. A new set of chimes was installed in the tower.

Several huge, red placards, with the motto of the revolution in big black letters, are plastered on the mediaeval walls of the fortress. One of the bloodiest fights of the Bolshevik revolution was fought in this square, where all are buried in a common grave at the foot of the wall, alongside John Reed, the American engineer and writer.

Lone Guard at Palace

Across the river, where Moscow's merchant princes and wealthy officials had their luxurious palaces and places of business, stands a lone Red guard, a peasant boy, at his sentry box at the gate of a courtyard. It was once the residence of a sugar magnate. It is now a dormitory for Red officials and guest house for distinguished foreign visitors, in Moscow on official missions.

Up and down the Sofskaya Nahorzha (Russian for Riverside) a few ragged children are playing on the deserted sidewalk in front of long rows of silent window-fronts. The counting houses have been locked for three years. Grass is sprouting between the cobblestones.

Up the great hill past the Kremlin—over ratty cobblestones and past long blocks of empty window-fronts—the broad theatre of Moscow's business life, is swarming with people. Some in old field gray, relics of service during the war; some in coarser workmen's clothes a few in business suits which show traces of many winters and summers—for virtually no new clothes have reached Russia during the six years of war and blockade; women in men's coats and patched skirts, some in old tailored suits, with handkerchiefs or hats on their heads; peasants with their worldly property rolled into a bundle on their shoulders.

All Dress Alike

They all look alike. They are all dressed very much alike. At first glance I thought they all were refugees. Such is the impression the mass makes as a whole. They are all sober. All is orderly and disciplined. Several Red guards are in evidence, but they don't seem to be bothering. The traffic moves quietly.

It is a nondescript traffic; shabby droshkies, hand pushcarts—I saw a procession of four hayloads filing solemnly through the center of Moscow—and an occasional automobile filled with Red officers or government officials.

At the end of the place is the huge Metropole Hotel, now the Foreign Office. A big placard on the wall labels it as the Second House of the Soviets. These "houses" are quite conspicuous throughout the center of the city—formerly large hotels or big office buildings—each with its huge placard in front, with Moscow-Soviet People's Committee, Central Women's Committee, etc., on them.

Inside is a business-like scene—it might have been a large commercial concern in the United States, with one department after another, except that, instead of messenger boys and door men, Red guards, with their inevitable long rifles and naked bayonets, are scattered throughout the corridors. A Red guard sits drowsily at the door of every important office, his rifle, bayonet fixed, leaning against his shoulder.

You are struck by the large proportion of young men and women. Everybody seems young. This is worthy of note, because it is typical of the Bolshevik movement. It is a movement of young men. The city streets feeding into the Theatre Place present a scene of activity resembling petty commercial life between bolted-up windows, little shops are open, clothing stores, toy shops, music shops, millinery, a few hardware, in fact, merchants with goods that could be, and mostly have been packed away in cellars. The great number however, are still closed.

Shops Opened

Many shopkeepers have opened little stands on the street, where they display their wares, like on the East Side in New York. Up and down the street you see people standing against the walls, holding out a platter with but one or two pieces of sausage, or a couple of heaps of a national Russian dish made from fish eggs. Others offer a small box of cigarettes. They sell the cigarettes for five thousand rubles a box.

In a window of a little music shop was an old violin and a dozen sheets of music—a collection of Chopin Etudes, something by Rachmaninoff an "Argentine tango," and a few popular Russian folk songs.

In Moscow's poor district is poverty and suffering beyond description. It was always so, of course, before the war. Moscow was a city of great luxury, finest churches, and deepest poverty. The poverty is pitiable now. And the houses look as if their landlords had run away years ago leaving a penniless tenant to make shift as best he could.

Moscow's beautiful public buildings, however, her wonderful wealth in architecture, are unmarred, despite the fact that her streets, furnished the stage for one of the hardest fought revolutions in history. I was surprised in the former big business district to find virtually no broken window panes, although there were immense glass fronts by scores.

All Locked Up

These gigantic empty business buildings, which seem to have been large counting houses, financial headquarters, or commercial houses of some character, look so out of place all locked up and empty, like a great machine in perfect condition, left cornered on the roadside.

Moscow's religious life, so deep in Russian character, has gone on in spite of revolution or hardship. The congregations present a sad appearance, however, in their old clothes. I was struck by the preponderance of seeming destitute among the congregation of the Church of Our Savior, the most beautiful temple in Moscow and perhaps in the world.

Among the sadder of the scenes, however, are the great market-places where people of all classes go to sell and buy food, clothing, etc. Distinguished looking ex-officers, with a last pair of army boots, to sell for enough money for a bit of bread; women with all that is left of their jewelry, offering it in exchange for food.

A little child held up to me a silver object which may have been her baby spoon.

MRS. MARGARETTA CLYDE

Mrs. Margaretta Clyde McCaulley died at her late home 232 Penna Avenue, Tyrone Pa., at 1:25 a. m. Tuesday morning after a lingering illness of nine weeks.

She was born in Sinking Valley,

Dec. 21, 1859. She was the daughter of Samuel C. and Margaretta Crawford Tussey.

She was married in Nov. 1895 to John A. McCaulley who with three children preceded her to the grave. She was survived by two brothers, Lee, Jr., of Salina, Pa., Harry C., of Altoona, one daughter, Mrs. Bowman Brown of Clearfield, Pa., two step children: Mrs. Laura Lyle, of Altoona and W. Frank McCaulley, of Wilkesburg, Pa. Her only sister, Mrs. Grace E. Dysart, preceded her to the grave some years ago.

She was a life long member of the Presbyterian church, a sincere conscientious christian woman who will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends and was a devoted and loving mother.

Services will be held on Friday at 3 p. m. Nov. 11th followed by private interment in Grandview cemetery in Tyrone.

Have You Tried Our Modern Family Washing Service?

Can't you hear him yet—the man who used to say, "Uh-h, baker's bread? Give me the home-made kind."

Today he smacks his lips over the purchased loaf and calls for more. Because bakers have kept pace with progress we have come to hold a new view about bread baked outside the home.

And that old bogey about the family washing— isn't it pretty much in the same category? Have you ever tried our modern family laundry service?

You will find us prepared and qualified to take your entire family-bundle. For example, if you like to be completely freed from the work of washtday, we will wash everything and iron everything. Or if you wish to do some of the finishing at home, we can give you a semi-service—washing everything, starching such pieces as require it, and ironing the heavier flannel, but leaving for you the finishing of personal apparel and tighter pieces.

You will learn on inquiry that we have other services, too—whatever your wash-day requirements you will find us with a modern service to meet them.

Everything will be returned sweet with thorough and through cleanliness—to insure this, we use as many as 600 gallons of pure, rainsoft water for each family washing.

Everything will be returned thoroughly sanitary—as your family physician will verify, our methods sterilize as well as cleanse.

Here is an economical way out of the wearing work of washtday. Telephone us today and have us take your next washing.

GERMANY HAS SCANT INTEREST IN ARMS MEET

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Germany stripped of her own armaments, is worrying little as to whether or not the Washington disarmament conference succeeds in stripping other nations.
That is to say, the man in the street knows little about the conference, for the German daily press has carried only brief, unclear notices of the preparations for this momentous session, and he fails to realize just where the meeting can affect him.
On the other hand, thinking men of Germany welcome the conference for they feel that it can perhaps reach some agreement whereby Germany will be under the influence of French military. Such men contend that Germany would be able better to pay her obligations if she were not constantly threatened with new penalties by an army to the west whose upbuilding has been considerable in the past two years.
Germans of this frame of mind hold too that present day Germany is prepared to give adequate guarantees for keeping the peace. The feeling in Germany against France is strong, just as in France Germany is thoroughly hated. Yet, thinking Germans say that a new war is not wanted, and that Germany is ready to prove this in any way satisfactory to the entente.

AGONY OF ASTHMA

New Prescription Gives Instant Relief. Makes Breathing Easy.
Thousands of people suffer from Bronchitis or Bronchial Asthma who, having tried advertised remedies, inhalers, Patent smokers, douches, doctors, changes in climate, etc., without permanent benefit believe nothing can ever make them well.
Extensive experiments finally enabled a Worcester, Mass., physician to find a simple, harmless remedy that gave almost instant relief in even the most stubborn advanced cases and great numbers of former Asthmatics have now used his treatment with wonderful success.
The doctor's prescription is called Oxidaze and can be obtained from leading druggists everywhere, who sell it on a guarantee of money back on the first package if in any case it fails to give prompt relief.
Many users who have been obliged to sit up in bed for years gasping for breath and unable to sleep report that they now take a dose of Oxidaze when going to bed and then can lie down and breathe easily and naturally and get a good night's restful sleep.
Oxidaze is a safe treatment, easy harmful, habit forming drugs.

WILL U. S. SPEND BILLIONS FOR DISARMAMENT?

and so distribute the sum as to bring a large measure of financial relief to every nation involved in the war, and this relief would restore friendly relations and permit a disarmament otherwise impossible. The cancellation of this debt, added to the reduction of military and naval expenses, would give the world a new birth and go far towards restoring normal conditions in business.
Could U. S. Afford It?
Could the United States afford it? A reduction of one-half in her military and naval appropriations would enable her to save the amount in less than twenty years; a reduction of three fourths in army and navy expenses would enable her to save the amount in less than fifteen years. It will be difficult for the debtor nations to pay the sum, and the obligation to pay it is made the basis for indemnities which, however just, threaten the amity of Europe for generations, and thus furnish an excuse for military and naval expenditures scarcely less burdensome than the indemnities.

Would People Stand For Expenses
Would the American people support such a proposition? Why not. They are sentimental; they spent over thirty millions to end war by peaceful means? And besides the American people are practical. If they can save enough on military and naval appropriations in fifteen or twenty years to compensate them for giving up the debt, why should they spend two or three times that sum on army and navy while they consume 100 years in collecting the debt, not to speak of the possible dangers that lurk in the attempt to collect such a debt from nations already overburdened?
Has this nation any better offer to make? Is any other nation able to make so large a contribution toward the success of the conference?

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

that citizen whose confidence in the righteousness of his country inspired belief that its triumph is the victory of humanity.

Not Hatred For People

But Hatred Of War
This American soldier went forth to battle with no hatred for any people in the world, but hating war and hating the purpose of every war for conquest. He cherished our national rights and abhorred the threat of armed dominations; and in the maelstrom of destruction and suffering and death he fired his shot for liberation of the captive consciousness of the world. In advancing toward his objective was somewhere a thought of a world awakened; and we are here to testify undying gratitude and reverence for that thought of a wider freedom.

On such an occasion as this, amid such a scene, our thoughts alternate between defenders living and defenders dead. A grateful republic will be worthy of them both. Our part is to atone for the losses of heroic dead by making a better republic for the living.

A Tomb in the Heart of a Nation
Sleeping in these hallowed grounds are thousands of Americans who have given their blood for the baptism of freedom and its maintenance, armed exponents of the nation's conscience. It is better, and nobler for their deeds. Burial here is rather more than a sign of the government's favor, it is a suggestion of a tomb in the heart of the nation, abhorring for its noble dead.

Today's ceremonies proclaim that the hero unknown is not unknown. We gather him to the nation's breast within the shadow of the capitol of the towering shaft that honors Washington, the great father and of the exquisite monument to Lincoln, the martyred savior. Here the inspirations of yesterday and the conscience of today forever unite to make the republic worthy of his death for flag and country.

Our lofty resolutions today, as with tributes to the dead we consecrate ourselves to a better order for the living. With all my heart

I wish we might say to the defenders who survive, to mothers who sorrow, to widows and children who mourn, that no such sacrifice shall be asked again.

War Only Scientific Destruction

It was my fortune recently to see a demonstration of modern warfare. It is no longer a conflict in chivalry, no more a test of militant manhood. It is only cruel, deliberate, scientific destruction. There was no contending enemy, only the theoretical defense of a hypothetical objective. But the attack was made with all the relentless methods of modern destruction. There was the rain of ruin from the aircraft, the thunder of artillery, followed by the unspeakable devastation wrought by bursting shells; there were mortars belching their bombs of desolation; machine guns concentrating their laden storms; there was the infantry, advancing, firing and falling—like men with souls sacrificing for the decision. The flying missiles were revealed by illuminating tracers, so that we could note their flight and appraise their deadliness. The air was streaked with tiny flames marking the flight of massed destruction; while the effectiveness of the theoretical defense was impressed by the simulation of dead and wounded among those going forward, undaunted and unheeding. As this panorama of unutterable destruction visualized the horrors of modern conflict, there grew on me the sense of the failure of a civilization which can leave its problems to such cruel arbitrament. Surely no one in authority, with human attributes and a full appraisal of the patriotic loyalty of his countrymen, could ask the manhood of kingdom, empire or republic to make such sacrifice until all reason had failed, until appeal to justice through understanding had been denied, until every effort of love and consideration for fellow men had been exhausted, until freedom itself and inviolate honor had been brutally threatened. I speak not as a pacifist fearing war, but as one who loves justice and hates war. I speak as one who believes the highest function of government is to give its citizens the security of peace, the opportunity to achieve, and the pursuit of happiness.

Put Mankind On A Higher Plane
The loftiest tribute we can bestow today—the heroically earned tribute—fashioned in deliberate conviction, out of unclouded thought neither shadowed by remorse nor made vain by fancies, is the commitment of this republic to an advancement never made before. If American achievement is a cherished pride at home, if our unselfishness among nations is all we wish it to be, and ours is a helpful example in the world, then let us give of our influence and strength, yea, of our aspirations and convictions, to put mankind on a little higher plane, exulting and exalting, with war's distressing and depressing tragedies barred from the stage of righteous civilization.

There have been a thousand defenses justly and patriotically made, a thousand offenses which reason and righteousness ought to have stayed. Of us beareth all men to join us in seeking the rule under which reason and righteousness shall prevail.

STATE FOREST GUARDS ON DUTY DAY AND NIGHT

Harrisburg, Nov. 9.—Forest five observers employed by the Pennsylvania Department of Forestry are now on duty, day and night, in small glass-enclosed cabins on the sixty-eight steel towers that have been erected on mountain tops in various parts of the State. They are guarding the State's timberlands, both privately owned and State-controlled, from destruction by fire. The observers have been equipped with the most approved appliances and instruments for the location of fires. Maps have been prepared showing all the mountain peaks, streams, valleys, rivers, towns and other features that lie within range of the watchmen's vision. In some cases, all the territory within twenty miles of the tower is shown on the map, and it is under the constant observation of the forest guardians. Complete Maps Furnished. The maps are mounted on revolving tables in the cabins, and in the center of the map is an alidade, an instrument set on a pivot so that it may be swung in any direction and sighted on a fire. This instrument shows the exact location of the fire, with reference to topographic features on the map. Arrows indicate the direction and distance to principal cities in the East. Towers, as far as practically possible, have been placed so that they cover virtually all the forested area within a given region. Sometimes the outlying territories visible from nearby towers overlap, thereby providing increased protection. The system of forest protection is the most modern method that has been devised in this or any other country.

Robert Heberling of Tyrone, who was accidentally shot by another hunter at the opening day of turkey season while tying up a bird which he had just shot, came to Clearfield today to enter the hospital where he will have one of the shot removed. While not painful the swelling has not gone down and his physician advised having it removed to prevent infection.

STORE WINDOWS BLOSSOM OUT WITH RED CROSS CARDS

Store windows throughout the central part of town have blossomed overnight with a flock of new posters advertising the Red Cross Roll Call drive which will be made on Sunday afternoon. When you see them stop and think for a moment of your obligation to the boys who sacrificed everything for you in the war then remember that the Red
